PERSONAL STATEMENT

I have taught and designed a variety of English Literature, Creative Writing, English (I, II, III) and Communication Skills courses. I have extensive experience working with ESL students and researchers. I pride myself in creating a tutorial environment that accommodates the needs of my individual students while still promoting a high level of critical thought and writing skills. I have worked in the capacity of the Patron at NUML Dramatics. I used performance as an effective tool for teaching and learning essential life skills. I am a strong believer in the Onto-Epistemological approach towards teaching. Therefore, I started a student focused publishing project, Rhizomatic Literaties. I aspire to be an educationist. The values I admire are accountability, action, adventure, balance, boldness, intelligence, creativity and open-mindedness. I fear stagnancy. In the near future, I aim to establish a Language and Drama Therapy Institute.
