The Psychological Background and Analysis of Fear, Fright, and Solitude in Munir Niazi's Poetry

After the independence of Pakistan writers and poets have been dilating upon the social degeneration in the society, economical dilapidation and the resultant puzzled psychology of human beings. Munir Niazi has unique distinction that he depicts the Intimidation, Fear, Fright, Fatigue and Solitude that grab the human physiology in its claws, in such a way that these elements appear in his own psychological puzzledom rather than anybody else's. Additionally one thing that completely captivates the heart and mind of the reader is that Muni Niazi does not return like a fearful child. Rather his action of staying and thinking entices the reader to continue the journey. His mission to search a large number of care givers to treat the puzzled psychology in the society is an outstanding attribute of Munir Niazi. In this article we find, in his poetry, the effects of the background of the Intimidation, Fear, Fright, Fatigue and Solitude in the shape of lack of adjustability after migration.
